

Engaging Students Remotely With Active Learning Strategies

	Distance Learning: A Gently Curated Collection of Resources for Teachers Jennifer Gonzalez 3/30/20	If you've found yourself teaching in a distance-learning situation, especially if it's been foisted upon you by circumstance, you'll discover pretty quickly that distance learning offers different challenges from face-to-face instruction. And if you look online, you'll find tons of ideas and resources that can help you tackle those challenges, so much that it's easy to get paralyzed at the volume of it all. This is especially true if you're expected to hit the ground running with very little notice. To help you, Jennifer has taken her best shot at sharing clear, carefully curated information on distance learning.
	A New REALM: Institute For Social and Emotional Learning Tips for Distance Learning	With many schools moving to Distance Learning during this pandemic, the Institute For Social and Emotional Learning is pulling from their collective and creative forces to support teachers to help students have virtual experiences full of human connection and joy in learning. The team at The Institute for Social and Emotional Learning has created and curated ideas that will address some of the social and emotional needs that students and educators are experiencing.
	Kathy Schrock's Online Tools and Kathy Shrock's Online Collaboration Tools	Web 2.0 tools and online utilities have become more full-featured and useful over the years. Here are some links to various online tools to help both teaching and learning. Online collaboration is a way for students to both feel comfortable in an environment larger than their classroom and also a way to teach them the aspects of becoming a global citizen.
	10 Ideas To Meaningfully Connect (Engage) Through Remote Learning and Remote Learning Opportunities by George Couros	George Couros, author and speaker, has provided some ideas and opportunities for remote learning. He says, "Change is an opportunity to do something amazing." You will find 10 ideas to connect and engage students through remote learning and some remote learning tips in the areas of check-ins, reading, math, writing, and fitness. These ideas can be used across all curriculum areas as you do something amazing in the changes you are making with remote learning.

Need More Resources? Check out www.misicimpact.org.

By providing links to other sites, MISIC does not guarantee or endorse the information or products available on these sites.