(More) Reflections About Book Studies

From Lowell Y: I learned that MISIC will work with us if we (Instructional coaches) decide to initiate a book study.

From Kelly K: I wonder how hard it would be to lead three or four book studies next year.

From Heather F: I feel that a book study is a wonderful way to provide PD in a meaningful way during this time. It allows for differentiation and connection amongst teachers/ coaches / admin. Thank you for your resources!

From Marilyn N: I learned that there are a multitude of book studies available and that several schools are using them as a means of delivering PD.

From Brenda Y: I wonder what role book studies might play in planning for next year in my role as instr. coach. Lots of potential!

From Andrew M: I feel this is a manageable task to take on for our staff, and would be greatly beneficial.

From Jenny S: I wonder which of these book studies might be a good fit for our combined elementary buildings.

From Carrie C: I feel that I can plan book studies for the upcoming school year.

From Amanda N: I had not thought about doing a book study with our paras- I love that idea!

From Wayne K: Para book student to get them involved more in PD. Something they can put to use though not just general subject matter.

From Chris M: Go East Sac! I was principal there from 1999-2006. Love hearing what you keep working on!

Closing Reflections

From Jon S: Listen to learn...not to respond! Practice 2X10 with staff as well as students. Connections Over Compliance - Lori L. Desautels, Ph.D is a great book as well. Wishing everyone a safe and blessed Holiday Break!!! #coviducks!!

From Rachella D: I have created a relaxing room for staff in the building.

From Cathy S: The Digital Formative Assessment Tools MC is timely for me! I will be following up with that for sure.

Closing Reflections Continued

From Jenny S: I want to explore the micro-credentials and bundles more. We have been wanting to find rich opportunities for our Art, Music, & PE teachers.

From Kelly K: I always appreciate what you share out and do...I want to make sure I look and continue to use the resources you provide! I plan opportunities for fun for others and it makes me feel better!

From Ruth V: Appreciate the additional opportunities for staff when they feel like they need help with an area and resources that are available and vetted.

From Callie A: Thank you for tying in opportunities for new learning in Special Education.

From Meghan K: I wonder if there would be interest in a book study for instructional coaches across different districts.

From Paul G: Thanks again for ALL of the great resources and organized information. MISIC staff rock!

From Tiersa F: Yes, really like the special education resources! I was also looking for resources to support adults working with students with Autism.

From Lisa P: I would be interested in an instructional coaches' book study!

From Jama H: I want to explore more in-depth, the micro-credentials and the opportunities I see that can come from MISIC. Thank you for sharing all of the great resources and ideas today. Happy holidays to all of the MISIC team and members!

From Cathy S: We are looking for resources for PE as well around Adaptive PE. If anyone is investigating those, feel free to pass along. We appreciate so much the quality of resources MISIC puts forth!

From Cathy S: I would also be interested in a book study for coaches.

From Jama H: Agree with Cathy!!
